Dear Sir:

In the selection of judges to make the awards of Peabody prizes at the Maryland Institute, the committee on Schools of Art and Design have been guided by expediency more than fixed rule: sometimes they called to their aid resident Artists, Engineers and Architects, but as I am informed by members of the Com. who have served a long time: they were frequently embarrassed about finding professional experts who would undertake the labor of a careful examination of all the work submitted, when they would be obliged to ask others, not strictly professionals but who possessed sufficient knowledge of the subjects to be competent judges; or, as they have done on several occasions: make the awards themselves. The latter, taking all things into consideration, proved the most satisfactory, so that at the close of last term, the committee decided: that since the three departments are represented in the Com. by gentlemen well qualified to judge as professionals, the merits of the pupils' works; they together with the Principal of the School should make the awards.

Dear Sir,

*Recd Oct 24

Although I have never had the pleasure of meeting you personally I may be known to you as the painter of "The Proclamation of Emancipation," in the Capitol at Washington. I am the owner of the famous painting by the late distinguished artist Charles S. Elliott, (who painted the full length portrait of Mr Corcoran for the Corcoran Gallery.)
known as "The Cavalier"

Circumstances compel me to part with this painting and I have been induced to first offer it to the directors of the Corcoran Gallery.

The history of the painting is this. It was painted in 1846, and ^{was} purchased by The American Art Union. It subsequently ~~came~~ into the possession of Gov.

Wright of New Jersey, who was the original owner of Rosa Bonheur's "Horse Fair".

After the death of Gov. Wright his pictures were sold and Henry Derby of The Derby Galleries, became the owner of "The Cavalier" - At the sale of The Derby pictures I purchased this painting and have owned it ever since. It has always been considered by artists one of the finest examples of Elliott's work, - and was solicited by the Committee of Artists for exhibition in the American Department of the Centennial exhibition at Philadelphia in 1876.

Elliott's pictures were almost exclusively portraits. This painting of "The Cavalier" is almost the only exception. It resembles ^{the work} and is worthy of Rubens, or Vandyke.

I will sell the painting for one thousand dollars though I consider this far below its value.

Mr. ^{S.P.} Avery, the picture dealer of this city, was an intimate friend of Mr. Elliott

Notice of a number of paintings by the old masters for sale.

Rec. Oct 25

Turin, Italy, October 1st 1884.

Mr. M. Lest

Curator Circovean Art Gallery, Washington D.C.

Sir:

There are several private and public galleries on both continents that can really pride themselves in the possession of some original paintings of the old Masters, but they are shedding so much lustre around that to detach them from their orbit it would amount to the destruction of the effect of the whole; few sales, if any, occur in our days and the opportunities of getting into the possession of paintings of real merit are becoming so rare, that the grouping together of the within described master pieces represents the intelligent labor of several generations; they are verified and acknowledged by the Academy of Fine Arts and by distinguished Professors to be the genuine paintings described in; while addressing you this notice I beg to inform you that the pictures can be seen on application to the American Consul at Turin who has consented to lend his valuable assistance to perfect any arrangement for his countrymen desiring to effect a purchase, and that I have his permission to refer you for all particulars to his kind offices.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient servant
Caroline Elv^{to} - Ugo Bruerati - Trotti

I Leonardo da Vinci.

72 x 150. centimeters

This picture is painted on a panel, terminating in the upper part in a semicircular form, measuring in height seventy two and in width one hundred and fifty centimeters, set in a grand gold frame. - It represents in the center the Madonna seated with her hands joined in the act of adoration of the divine Infant reclining on her lap transversally in an almost horizontal line; through the arches of a temple above them in the background, a landscape unfolds itself lit by the morning sun.

On one side of the Madonna are standing St Hieronym and St Joseph, on the other St Dominic and St Francis d'Assise.

The posture of the persons, the ton of light, the rosary in the hands of St Dominic who introduced it, and the words of angelic salutation and of prayer to the Virgin written on his cloak and his turning from the infant Christ to the bystanders, meanwhile the index of his hand points to the Mother, as much as to say, that people should worship her, explain that in the painters mind the subject of this composition was the "Ave Maria".

Since 1863 the more eminent artists attributed this valuable picture to the pencil of Leonardo da Vinci, and recently, that is to say in the month of April of the year of 1883, the Albertine Royal Academy of Fine Arts at Turin, has has unanimously confirmed that judgement and, concluding that this valuable picture, as an illustration of the fine style of the Italian Arts' best period, was worthy to adorn a prominent gallery, - the Academy, in an authentic and purposely written document, has rendered said judgement to the owner.

II. Antonelli da Messina.

68 x 55.

This painting on panel in a rich golden frame represents a landscape and a person dressed in the style of the 15th century. This most beautiful picture is of a surprising effect in every part, and it reveals instantaneously that it is the work of a master of the arts. Most of the artists who have seen it in past years have attributed it to Raffaello Langio, and two Masters of the Academy of Fine Arts were lately enchanted with it; one of whom thought first that it was the work of Giovanni Battista Bellini, but decided afterwards together with the other that, if it was not from Raffaello himself, it must have been painted by Antonelli da Messina, a not less renowned artist.

III. Guido Reni.

75 x 128.

This picture on canvass in an ancient richest golden frame represents St Bartholomew's martyrdom; there is a torturer, who tears off the skin of of an arm, and another man, with a turban, who must have been the one, who has ordered the torture, is intently watching this awful work; between them there is another head visible, which, instead of being intent to this operation, looks towards the spectators, and which must have been meant for the painter himself, a thing sometimes resorted to, in the composition of the more important pictures.

Without really beholding it, it would be impossible to duly appreciate the great beauty of this picture. As many as have seen it liken it to the original and sublime work of the famous Guido Reni, which exactly corresponds with his usual initials found in this picture.

IV. Maynard.

Picture on canvass in a rich golden frame representing a grand Lute, who is playing the lute; the natural likeness, energy and expression of the player strike you so forcibly that you imagine you see a living creature before you, and can not but be attributed to the original painting of a grand artist. Some think it owing to a Master of the Flemish school, others take it to be the work of an eminent French artist, the great painter Maynard. This picture belonged of old to the now extinct family of the Princes of Sommariva and was the center of attraction in the gallery of their magnificent villa at Baden-

Cadenavia on the lake of Como.

V. Giulio Cesare Procaccino.

100 x 125.

Picture in beautiful quilt frame represents an angel with sword in hand chasing from paradise Adam and Eve.

VI. Unknown.

95 x 108.

Painting on a panel in quilt frame represents Judith almost naked in room of Holoferne having in one hand a blood stained sword and in the other the head of Holoferne, whose body is seen under a bed; a woman standing by with open sack. Most beautiful are the features of Judith, and the head of Holoferne is of a surprising effect. The opinions too varied about its author agree in pronouncing it to be the most perfect model for a school.

VII. Of Flemish School.

95 x 128.

Painting on a panel in quilt frame represents two old knowing ones who surprise the chaste Susanna in her bathing room; their heads are most natural and of really wonderful effect; handsome and attractive is the figure of the most beautiful Susanna and charming is the landscape gleaming through this this picture and the ancient ornaments of the bathing room. This picture is worthy to the pencil of the best Flemish artist.

VIII. Mariotto Albertinetti.

50 x 65.

Painting on a panel in richest quilt frame, represents the "announcement to Virgin Mary". Both, the angel and the Virgin are of surprising beauty; over them in the clouds is seen the Almighty, with one hand raised and holding in the other an open book, in which the following words are legible: Alpha and Omega, (beginning and end.) A pigeon is starting from the clouds, flying towards the blessed Virgin. The Florentine painter of this marvellous work lived in the 15th century.

IX. Luigi Morales.

50 x 70.

This painting on panel in rich golden frame represents the Mother of Jesus Christ embracing her death son. By all the distinguished artists who examined this magnificent painting it was recognized to be the work of the Spanish Master Morales, surnamed the "divine" from the sentiment breathing through the genre of his works, which were his main occupation.

X. Lippi. 35 x 98.

This painting on a panel and quilt frame represents represents the two babes: Jesus and St John embracing each other.

XI. Vandyke.

90 x 120.

This picture on canvass in rich quilt frame represents the Madonna nursing the infant Christ who turns towards heaven to see the angels. St Joseph is also visible gazing at them with devout meditation. The Madonna is represented in the figure of a very beautiful woman.

XII. Unknown.

80 x 115.

On canvass within painted wooden frame represents the Madonna worshipping the infant Jesus on her lap, and on either side a cherub in adoration; this painting, judging from the style of its execution, belongs to the 14th century.

XIII. Parmigianino.

70 x 84.

Picture on canvass represents the Madonna the infant Christ, St John and another Saint.

XIV. Gaudenzio Ferrari.

60 x 105.

Painting on panel in quilt frame represents the manger in a cloud on which are seven angels, each with an emblem of crucifixion.

XV.

XV. Murillo.

60 x 105.

Painting on panel in quilt frame represents the carrying of the Virgin Mary into heaven, by four angels, with the twelve apostles looking at the assumption.

XVI. Murillo.

50 x 60.

Painting on canvass represents a sympathetic troubadour, playing the lute; a precious picture of the illustrious Spanish painter.

XVII. Raffaello Sanzio.

30 x 35.

Painting on panel represents a pretty woman with a naked child in her arms, who gives her a wreath of flowers; an other child having a fur dress is slumbering near by. The background is a fine landscape.

XVIII. Nicolas Poussin.

42 x 52.

Two pictures on canvass in quilt frames represent beautiful landscapes with figures; they are attributed to the very famous French artist.

XIX. Vandyke.

38 x 48.

This picture on canvass in a quilt frame represents representing heads at different ages is a master piece of the great painter.

XX. Barbieri Domenichino.

45 x 60.

Picture on canvass in rich quilt frame represents a very pretty woman in the form of St Lucia, having in her hand a little plate with two eyes in it.

XXI. Corradi.

50 x 60.

Two pictures on canvass in quilt frames of equal size; one represents three and the other two heads, expressing great joy, profound sorrow, high extasy, deep meditation and keen observation.

XXII. Piccini del Toga.

65 x 75.

Painting on panel in quilt frame represents the Madonna in a temple on a throne holding on her lap the Child; on one side stands St John the Baptist with a lamb in his hand; a bishop is in the other corner.

XXIII. Rubens.

58 x 90.

Painting on canvass in rich frame represents Christ dead, his Mother, Magdalena and an angel; higher up a number of little angels

XXIV

XXIV. Tiziano

80 x 100.

Painting on canvass in rich frame represents Christ with the crown of thorns and the cross in hand.

XXV. Palma.

100 x 140.

Painting on canvass in quilt frame represents the Madonna and the infant Jesus, St John, St Joseph, St Agnes and an other Saint having a palm in hand, the work of the old Venetian Palma.

XXVI. Unknown.

25 x 90

Painting on canvass represents flowers fruit and game.

XXVII. Luini.

65 x 65.

A fresco painting of the famous Luini, reproduced on canvass representing men and women, with the likeness of the painter in the center.

XXVIII. Recchi.

55 x 95.

Painting on canvass represents the Roman Quinto Curzio on horseback, who plunges himself into the abyss in the presence of the people with the name of the painter and the year 1860 on the picture.

XXIX. Tiepolo.

40 x 55.

Painting on canvass represents the presentation of the infant Jesus in the temple with great many figures. A work of great merit of the Venetian artist.

XXX. Guido Reni.

25 x 30.

Painting on panel, black frame, represents the ascending Virgin Mary.

XXXI. Correggio.

40 x 30.

This painting on a panel within a very rich quilt frame with arabesques in relief of the year 1500, is shut up in a wooden casing. Represents the Madonna with the infant Christ who, with one hand receives a fruit from St. John the Baptist and reclines with the other on the breast of St. Catherine of Alexandria Egypte, so called of the Wheel; who takes with the right hand the wreath of martyrdom, which the Madonna holds out to her, and with the left caresses the infant Jesus; in the front of the picture and a little further below sits an angel playing the mandolin and beyond there is a most beautiful landscape in which from afar are seen the angel, who accompanies young Tobias and a round shaped temple. This magnificent picture is of a surprising effect and it does honor to the wonderful pencil of Correggio.

XXXII. Giulio Cesare Procaccino.

90 x 190.

Painting on canvass represents St. Sebastian and a woman who takes the arrows out of his body, with an angel below who gathers them together, a soldier on horseback is departing in the distance; this picture is wonderfully expressive and is attributed to the renowned painter Giulio Cesare Procaccino.

XXXIII. Federico Barocci da Urbino.

50 x 60.

Painting on cloth in rich quilt frame represents the love of angels, that is to say little angels are seen within the skies, embracing each other; a most natural and charming picture.

Sir:

Recd Aug 25

Turin, Italy, October 1st 1884.

There are several private and public galleries on both continents that can really pride themselves in the possession of some original paintings of the old Masters, but they are shedding so much lustre around that to detract them from their orbit it would amount to the destruction of the effect of the whole; fero sales, if any, occur in our days and the opportunities of getting into the possession of paintings of real merit are becoming so rare, that the grouping together of the within described master pieces represents the intelligent labor of several generations; they are verified and acknowledged by the Academy of Fine Arts and by distinguished Professors to be the genuine paintings described in; while addressing you this notice I beg to inform you that the pictures can be seen on application to the American Consul at Turin who has consented to lend his valuable assistance to perfect any arrangement for his countrymen desiring to effect a purchase, and that I have his permission to refer you for all particulars to his kind offices.

I am, Sir,

Mr Watters
Director of the Circoran an Gallery

Your obedient servant
Cavaliere ^{to} Ugo Brunati-Trotti

I Leonardo da Vinci.

72 x 150. centimeters

This picture is painted on a panel terminating in the upper part in a semicircular form, measuring in height seventy two and in width one hundred and fifty centimeters, set in a grand gold frame. It represents in the center the Madonna seated with her hands joined in the act of adoration of the divine Infant reclining on her lap transversally in an almost horizontal line; through the arches of a temple above them in the background a landscape unfolds itself, lit by the morning sun.

On one side of the Madonna are standing St. Hieromo and St. Joseph, on the other St. Dominic and St. Francis d'Assise.

The posture of the persons, the tone of light, the rosary of the hands of St. Dominic, who introduced it, and the words of angelic salutation and of prayer to the Virgin written on his cloak, and his turning from the infant Christ to the bystanders meanwhile the index of his hand points to the Mother, as much as to say, that people should worship her, explain that in the painters mind the subject of this composition was the "Ave Maria."

Since 1803 the more eminent artists attributed this valuable picture to the pencil of Leonardo da Vinci, and recently, that is to say in the month of April of the year of 1883, the Albertine Royal Academy of Fine Arts at at Turin, has unanimously confirmed that judgement and, concluding that this valuable picture, as an illustration of the fine style of the Italian Arts' best period, was worthy to adorn a prominent gallery, - the Academy in an authentic and purposely written document has rendered said judgement to the owner.

II. Antonelli da Messina. 68 x 55.

This painting on panel in a rich golden frame represents a landscape and a person dressed in the style of the 15th century. - This most beautiful picture is of a surprising effect in every part, and it reveals instantaneously that it is the work of a Master of the arts. Most of the artists, who have seen it in past years, have attributed it to Raffaello Sanzio, and two Masters of the Academy of Fine Arts were lately enchanted with it, one of whom thought first that it was the work of Giovanni Battista Bellini, but decided afterwards together with the other that, if it was not from Raffaello himself, it must have been painted by Antonelli da Messina, a not less renowned artist.

III. Guido Reni.

75 x 128.

This picture on canvas in an ancient richest golden frame represents St. Bartholomew's martyrdom; there is a torturer, who tears off off the skin of an arm, and another man, with a turban, who must have been the one who has ordered the torture, is intently watching this awful work; between them there is another head visible, which, instead of being intent to this operation, looks towards the spectator, and which must have been meant for the painter himself; a thing sometimes resorted to, in the composition of the more important pictures. Without really beholding it, it would be impossible to duly appreciate the great beauty of this picture. As many as have seen it liken it to the original and sublime work of the famous Guido Reni, which exactly corresponds with his usual initials found in this picture.

3370

IV. Maynard.

90 x 105.

Picture on canvas in a rich golden frame representing a grand sire, who is playing the lute; the natural likeness, energy and expression strike you so forcibly that you imagine you see a living creature before you and can not but be attributed to the original painting of a great artist. Some think it owing to a Master of the Flemish school, others take it to be the work of an eminent French artist the great painter Maynard; This picture belonged of old old to the now extinct family of the Princes of Sommariva and was the center of attraction in the gallery of their magnificent villagiatura at Cadenabia on the lake of Como.

The opinions too varied about its author agree in pronouncing it to be the most perfect model for a school.
